Notes :

A visa is needed for most visitors over a 14 day stay. It is possible to arrange this for pick up on arrival but it's recommended to arrange in advance.

You cannot do the daily distance on Vietnamese roads that you can do overseas.

A 200km day drive is 6/7+ hour drive.

Weather can change dramatically. Although the weather should be good as the rainy season here doesn't start until June/July come prepared with some rain gear.

There are no guarantees when doing a road trip here that the agenda will be easier or more difficult than previous years. The driving conditions here at best are challenging. Also daily distances achievable are not to be underestimated. A long 8-9 hour day here is only 200km's and that's hard work. Most rides are estimated to be about 150km's per day, some are less and a couple maybe up to the 200km mark. For most riders this is enough and at the end of the day it's primarily a holiday of course. Also with 5-6 hour days the rides are a lot more leisurely , we can take more scenic roads, we have more time for pics and photo stops and it means we usually arrive in time for the Happy Hours at the bars :)

As usual sometimes we will be off the beaten track and with this April ride also focuses more on some countryside rides, beach R&R as well as some scenic scootering and taking in national parks, floating markets, ancient temples, mangrove forests, great food, boat trips and stunning beaches.
